A Dream October

By Jim Ingraham

It was the month nobody in Cleveland wanted to end. It was too delicious to let go. Too exhausting to survive. And too darn much fun to ignore.

It was October, 1995.

The month when the Indians fired missiles of memories into the hearts of their fans. Fans who as they grow older will tell their children and grandchildren what it was like to be there, just as their parents and grandparents told them what it was like in 1954 and 1948.

It was October, 1995. And very few Indians fans had ever been through anything like this before. Ever.

It was like living a dream.

Every day.

Strap your emotions into that big Wahoo Roller Coaster, and hang on! After 40 years of cold and drafty Octobers in Cleveland, this one was warm and would be mentally prepared for the post-season. "After we won the division, we still had 20 games left in the season, and our guys went out and played as hard as they had before we clinched. Seeing that set my mind at ease. Plus, this club believes in itself a lot."

One month later, the Indians had proven it. Making its first post-season appearance in 41 years, the Tribe won seven of nine games in eliminating Boston in a three-game sweep in the Division Series, and then outlasting Seattle in a gut-wrenching six-game American League Championship Series.

That earned the Indians a trip to the World Series, where they lost in six games to the Atlanta Braves.

Overall, the Indians were 9-6 in their 15 post-season games. Every one of those games was like a mini-drama, and almost every player in the Indians lineup at one time or another, played a key role.

"It was exciting to be there," Albert Belle said of the Tribe's first appearance in the World Series since 1954. "You say at the beginning of spring training fuzzy. Finally.

It was October, 1995.

A Dream October.

It began with the end of the regular season, and the Indians put a punctuation mark – a huge exclamation point, really – on their season with a 17-7 mauling of Kansas City on the final day of the season, which was also the first day of October. The win gave the Tribe a final record of 100-44, and an incomprehensible 30-game margin over the second-place Royals, the biggest margin for a division or pennant-winning team in history.

So overwhelming was the Indians runaway in 1995 that there hadn't been a team within 10 games of the first place Tribe since July 2. As the team prepared to face Boston in the newly-created Division Series, which would be played under the always-dangerous best-of-five format, with the last three games to be played in Boston, skeptics wondered how the Indians, who hadn't played an important game in months, would react to the pressure of post-season play.

The bulk of the Tribe's position players had zero post-season experience.

"I wasn't worried," said Manager Mike Hargrove about whether his team that you're going to go to the World Series – and then you actually go to the World Series."

Indeed, it was a wild ride through the playoff rapids that got the Indians to the Fall Classic, and Kenny Lofton said he tried as best he could to prepare himself for his first World Series experience.

"Before the Series I talked to Bobby Bonilla and Kirby Puckett," Lofton said. "And they both told me that this will be the chance of a lifetime, that I should enjoy it as much as I can because there are a lot of players who go a whole career without getting a chance to play in a World Series."

That wasn't the only advice Bonilla and Puckett gave Lofton.

"They said, 'the World Series – that's when the show starts,'" Lofton says. "I tried to keep my composure and not let the hype get the best of me. I knew it was the World Series and that everyone was watching, but I tried to do everything the same way I did during the season."

During the League Championship Series vs. Seattle, Lofton was the focal point of one of the most electrifying moments in Indians history. It came in Game 6, which the Indians, behind the brilliant pitching of Dennis Martinez, won 4-0, clinching their first American League pennant in 41 years.

After a heart-stopping 3-2 victory in Game 5 at Jacobs Field – a victory preserved by Paul Assenmacher, who caused mass fibrillation in the standing-room-only crowd by striking out Ken Griffey Jr. and Jay Buhner with runners at first and third, one out, and the Indians clinging to a one-run lead in the seventh inning – the Indians carried a 3-2 lead in the series back to The Kingdom for Game 6.

In order to avoid playing in a do-or-die Game 7 on the road, the Indians faced the challenge of having to beat the nearly-unbeatable Randy Johnson in his home ballpark.

“Given the history of what the Mariners had done the last two months to beat the Angels to get into the playoffs, then to beat the Yankees in the playoffs, we didn’t want to go into a seventh game if we could help it,” Hargrove said.

Game 7 wasn’t needed, however, thanks to the flying feet of Lofton and a heroic pitching performance by Martinez.

Martinez pitched seven scoreless innings and combined with two relievers on a four-hit shutout in what turned out to be a pulsating Tribe victory.

The pivotal play in the game came with the Indians leading 1-0 in the eighth inning. With Ruben Amaro at third and Lofton at second, a pitch from Johnson bounced off catcher Dan Wilson’s glove, rolling toward the Indians dugout.

Amaro scored on the play, and then, in a breathtaking example of his speed, so did Lofton. The Tribe speedster never slowed down coming around third base. TV replays captured perfectly the image of Lofton streaking toward home plate and an unsuspecting Johnson.

“That may be the most dramatic play I’ve ever seen,” Hargrove said. “I remember seeing Amaro score and saying to myself, ‘Good. There’s one run.’ Then I was watching Wilson, and I saw him do a double take. I’m like, ‘What’s going on?’ And before I had a chance to get nervous, Lofton was across the plate.”

Lofton said his bluff turned into a non-bluff.

“I came around the (third base) bag, trying to bluff him, but he never reacted, so I kept going,” Lofton said.

“The impact of that play is what I remember most,” Hargrove said. “You could just see Johnson’s shoulders slump after it happened. That’s when we knew we had him.”

Only a play the magnitude of Lofton’s gallop to glory could overshadow what happened in the early morning hours of October 4 at Jacobs Field, another electric moment from October that will forever stamp Tony Pena’s name into the Tribe’s historical scrapbook.

It was Game 1 of the Division Series vs. Boston, and it began on October 3. The game was nothing short of a classic.

The Indians led 3-2 in the eighth inning, but a home run by Luis Alicea off Julian Tavarez tied the score, and the teams headed into extra innings. In the top of the 11th, Tim Lincecum homered off Jim Poole to give Boston a 4-3 lead.

But in the bottom of the 11th, Belle slammed a home run off Rick Aguilera to tie it again. Following the home run, Boston Manager Kevin Kennedy asked the umpires to confiscate Belle’s bat. That led to Belle’s now-famous pose in the dugout in which he pointed at his bulging bicep while yelling at the Boston bench.

“I was expecting it,” Belle said. “It was the playoffs and they were looking for some way to get an edge on us. But it backfired on them. The same thing happened to the White Sox. They checked my bat and they went right down the tubes. So maybe we should tell teams to keep checking my bats. Because the more they check them, the better we play.”

Hargrove said the incident lit a fuse under his team.

“It really fired us up. It really got to us,” he said. “Boston thought they had a win after Naehring’s homer. But then Albert hits one off one of the best closers in the game.”

Tied now at 4-4, the two teams played a scoreless 12th inning. The Red Sox failed to score into the top of the 13th. In the bottom of the 13th, Pena came to the plate with two outs and nobody on base.

Facing lefthander Zane Smith, Pena, the ex-Red Sox, worked the count to 3-0.

“I remember thinking, ‘do I give Tony the take sign or let him swing away?’” Hargrove recalled. “I decided to have him take a pitch. I gave the take sign to (third base coach) Jeff Newman, but Tony got it late from Jeff, and it didn’t click.”

So on Smith’s 3-0 pitch, Pena swung.

And ended the game.

Pena lifted a flyball that just made it over the left field wall for a game-winning, game-ending home run. It landed at 2:08 in the morning, and it ended the 5 hour, 1 minute game, which at the time made it the longest post-season game in Major League history – although the Yankees and Mariners would break that record the following night.

Pena’s home run may have been the most important single hit of the month for the Indians. Instead of trailing in the series 1-0, with three of the next four games to be played in Boston, the Indians led 1-0, and they seemed to feed off the energy of Pena’s blow.

In Game 2, Orel Hershisier and three relievers combined on a three-hit shutout as the Indians, behind a home run by Eddie Murray off Erik Hanson, won 4-0.

The series shifted to Boston for Game 3, and the Indians quickly sent the Red Sox home for good with an 8-2 win. Jim Thome’s two-run home run off Tim Wakefield was the big blow in the game, but the Tribe’s biggest weapon was its pitching.

Mo Vaughn and Jose Canseco, Boston’s Nos. 3 and 4 hitters, were a combined 0 for 27 vs. Tribe pitching.

to a .184 batting average. The three starting pitchers, Dennis Martinez, Hershiser, and Charles Nagy allowed just 12 hits in 20 innings, and had a 1.33 ERA.

The Indians had led the American League in pitching during the regular season, and nothing changed in October. As the games got bigger, the Indians pitching got better.

"We knew they all had the ability to pitch that way," Hargrove said of the Tribe's amazing arms during October. "But it says a lot about guys like Martinez, Hershiser, Nagy, and the rest that they were able to turn it up a notch when it counted most."

Like in Game 2 of the ALCS, after the Indians were, to the surprise of all, handcuffed by unknown rookie Bob Wolcott, who beat the Tribe 3-2 in Game 1 at The Kingdome.

The Indians started Martinez in that game, and the Martinez-Wolcott matchup seemed lopsided in the Indians favor – especially when Wolcott started the game by walking the first three batters he faced in the first inning. The flood gates appeared ready to swing open.

But then a funny thing happened.

Nothing.

Wolcott retired the next three batters in order, without allowing a run – giving the Mariners a huge momentum swing which they rode to a 3-2 victory. "We let him get through three innings without scoring a run, and he seemed to pick up momentum after that," said Indians hitting coach Charlie Manuel of Wolcott.

The loss in Game 1 put even more pressure on the Indians to win Game 2, and Hershiser responded with his best outing of the year.

Simply put, Hershiser refused to let the Indians lose. He tossed eight brilliant innings, holding Seattle to one run on four hits, as the Indians, backed by two home runs by Manny Ramirez, won 5-2.

"In the second half of the season, Orel started to get the strength back in his arm," Hargrove said. "His velocity improved, and once he felt good about his health, that gave him the ability to turn it up a notch. He can get into a zone quicker than any pitcher I've ever seen."

Hershiser, who led all Tribe pitchers with four wins in the post-season, had one of the Indians two wins in the World Series against the Braves. Overall, however, the Braves' pitching was too much for the Tribe hitters, holding them to a .179 average in the six games.

It was a disappointing conclusion to a historic month, but even in defeat the Indians used the World Series as a learning experience that could prove invaluable should they make a return trip this year.

"I think as a team we learned not to take anything for granted," said Lofton of the Indians World Series experience. "The hype was so big we had guys trying to do too much."

Manuel said the hype comes with the territory.

"The big difference in the post-season for guys who have never been there before is that each at-bat gets so scrutinized by everyone, the media, the fans, everyone," Manuel said. "It's like every at-bat is the most important one of your life. Players need to put that out of their minds and try to approach it like a regular season game."

Everyone agreed that there is nothing approaching the intensity of baseball in October, and Thome said it was the intensity level of the World Series that he most remembers.

"Every game is like Opening Day," he said. "I don't know. Looking back on it now, it's all like a blur to me. But I do know it was a great experience I will treasure for the rest of my life."

My Top 25 Moments of 1995

By Jim Ingraham

25 PULLING THE PLUG ON THE WHITE SOX – In the first meeting of the season between the two supposed super powers of the Central Division, on May 29 at Jacobs Field, the Indians fell behind 6-0 to the White Sox after five innings. But the Tribe, helped by Dave Winfield's only home run in an Indians uniform, stormed back to score seven runs in their last three at-bats to beat the Sox 7-6. This was the first game of what turned into a four-game Tribe sweep, and the White Sox were never heard from again in 1995.

INDIANS VS. TWINS MARATHON – On May 7 at Jacobs Field, the game that wouldn't end finally ended on an RBI single by Kenny Lofton in the bottom of the 17th inning, giving the Indians a 10-9 victory over Minnesota in the longest game in elapsed time (6 hours, 36 minutes) in both teams' histories. During the game, the two teams went through 132 baseballs, and the 17 pitchers threw a combined 590 pitches.

23 INDIANS VS. TIGERS SEESAW – In another wild one between the Indians and Tigers, this time at Tiger Stadium, Ron Tingley (Ron Tingley?) bashed an opposite-field grand slam home run off Mesa in the bottom of the ninth inning to erase an 8-4 Indians lead. But in the top of the 10th, Omar Vizquel stroked a two-out RBI single to give the Indians a 9-8 lead. Then in the bottom of the 10th, Vizquel and Carlos Baerga combined on an eye-popping 6-4-3 game-ending double play.

JOSE MESA'S FIRST BLOWN SAVE – In one of the wilder games of the season on August 25 at Jacobs Field, Jose Mesa gave up a two-out home run to Detroit's Chad Curtis in the bottom of the ninth inning. The homer snapped Mesa's consecutive saves record at 38. Not to worry: In the bottom of the 11th inning, Sandy Alomar ripped a home run over the left field wall off Felipe Lira to give the Tribe a 6-5 victory.

21 DENNIS MARTINEZ'S NEAR-PERFECT GAME – One of the most dominating pitching performances of the season came on July 5 in a 2-0 victory by the Indians over the Rangers at Jacobs Field. Dennis Martinez retired 18 of the 19 batters he faced before being removed after a second rain delay. The only batter to reach base off Martinez was Rusty Greer on an infield single in the first inning. Making the performance even more incredible was that Martinez sat through a two-hour rain delay after the second inning, then returned to the mound and retired the Rangers 1-2-3 on three ground balls. A 49-minute rain delay after the sixth inning forced Mike Hargrove to remove Martinez, who pitched six nearly-perfect innings.

ALBERT BELLE'S AUG. 30TH THUNDER – The day before Belle's home run off Rogers, he hit a solo home run in the 14th inning off Tony Castillo to give the Indians a 4-3 victory over Toronto. Thus, on consecutive days, Belle hit a home run in extra innings to beat the Blue Jays.

19 ALBERT BELLE'S DEJA BOOM! – On Aug. 31, with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning, Belle blasted a pitch off Toronto's Jimmy Rogers over the left field wall at Jacobs Field for a game-ending home run that gave the Indians a 6-4 victory. Making the home run even more dramatic is it followed this:

FIRST INNING FLUSH OF THE ROYALS – Poor Doug Linton. On May 9 at Jacobs Field, the Kansas City pitcher retired Tony Pena on a ground ball for the first out of the first inning. For Linton, there was just one problem: the Indians were already leading 8-0. The Tribe tied a Major League record by scoring eight runs before making their first out of the first inning. The first eight batters in the Indians lineup reached base and scored before Linton finally retired No. 9 hitter Pena. Here's how it went: home run (Lofton), walk, home run (Baerga), single, single, single, walk, walk, home run (Sorrento). The Indians won 10-0.

17 JOSE MESA'S HOUDINI ACT IN TORONTO – With the Indians leading 5-4 in the bottom of the ninth inning on May 28 at SkyDome, the Blue Jays loaded the bases with one out against Mesa. Ed Sprague, who had struck out in his first four at-bats, was the batter. This time Sprague didn't strike out. Better than that: Mesa got him to rip a grounder to Omar Vizquel, who started a game-ending double play.

YANKEE STADIUM STUNNER – This was almost a duplicate of the Fenway Park stunner, except it came in New York. In the first game of a doubleheader on Aug. 10 at Yankee Stadium, the Indians trailed 9-5 in the ninth inning. The Tribe opened the ninth this way: single, single, double, triple, popout, single, double. By the time the inning ended, the Indians had scored five runs and went on to win, 10-9.

15 FENWAY PARK STUNNER – On May 19 at Fenway Park, the Indians trailed the Red Sox 5-3 heading into the top of the ninth inning. Then came the sledgehammer. Down to their last out of the game, the Indians erupted for six runs to post a 9-5 victory. Ramirez led off the inning with a home run off Ken Ryan, and Belle added a three-run blast off Ryan later in the inning.

ALBERT BELLE'S THREE -HOME RUN GAME AT CHICAGO – This came near the end of Belle's incredible late-season home run frenzy. On Sept. 19 at Comiskey Park, one day after hitting two home runs vs. the Sox, Belle erupted for three more, giving him five homers in two days, equaling a Major League record. The third home run gave Belle 44 for the season, breaking Al Rosen's club record of 43, which had stood for 42 years.

13 JOSE MESA'S 37TH CONSECUTIVE SAVE – In an 8-5 win over Milwaukee on August 20 at Jacobs Field, Mesa pitched the ninth inning to record his 37th consecutive save to start the season, breaking Dennis Eckersley's Major League record. At the start of the season, the Indians didn't think they had a bullpen closer. Halfway through it, they knew they had the best.

12 DENNIS MARTINEZ IN GAME 6 OF THE ALCS AT SEATTLE – With the Indians one victory away from a trip to the World Series, Martinez threw the team on his back and pitched one of the great games of his career. In anchoring a 4-0 Tribe win, Martinez pitched seven shutout innings, holding the Mariners to four hits, three of them singles, one of which never left the infield.

OREL HERSHISER IN GAME 2 OF THE ALCS AT SEATTLE – The Indians had lost Game 1 to unknown Bob Wolcott, but Hershiser salvaged a split in the first two games in Seattle with one of the great clutch pitching performances in Tribe history. In a 5-2 Tribe victory, Hershiser pitched eight sensational innings, holding the Mariners to one run on four hits, striking out seven. Hershiser retired 20 of the last 24 batters he faced. The only run he allowed came on a home run by Ken Griffey Jr. None of the other 30 batters Hershiser faced made it past second base.

10 THE INDIANS 100th VICTORY – With a chance to post the ninth-best winning percentage in baseball history and to complete the almost incomprehensible feat of winning 100 of 144 games in a season, the Indians, on the last day of the season, produced a vintage Tribe performance: a 17-7 mugging of Kansas City at Jacobs Field. The Indians scored six runs in the first inning, five in the second, six in the fifth. . . well, you get the picture. The win also made the Indians final winning margin in the Central Division 30 games, a Major League record.

PAUL ASSENMACHER'S ALCS STRIKEOUT BINGE 9 – In the top of the seventh inning of Game 5 of the ALCS vs. Seattle at Jacobs Field, the Indians were clinging to a 3-2 lead, when the Mariners put runners at first and third with one out. But in the most spectacular relief outing of the year, Assenmacher marched in from the bullpen to strike out both Ken Griffey Jr. and Jay Buhner to end the rally and preserve a one-run victory for the Tribe. Had Assenmacher failed, the series would have returned to Seattle with the Mariners leading 3-2 instead of the Indians leading 3-2.

8 EDDIE MURRAY'S 3000th HIT – Unfortunately, the historic moment came on the road, before a relatively meager crowd of 27,416 on June 30th at the Metrodome in Minneapolis. In the sixth inning, Murray stroked an 0-1 pitch from Mike Trombley into right field to become the 20th player in history to collect 3,000 hits.

MANNY RAMIREZ'S "WOW!" HOME RUN OFF DENNIS ECKERSLEY 7 – On July 16 at Jacobs Field, the Indians were trailing the A's 4-3 in the bottom of the 12th inning when Ramirez launched a two-out, two-strike, two-run home run into the left field bleachers. As Ramirez rounded the bases after making the Tribe a 5-4 winner, a shocked Eckersley walked off the field mouthing the word "Wow!"

6 PAUL SORRENTO'S HOME RUN VS. TORONTO ON JUNE 4 – Jacobs Field went berserk when Sorrento slammed a pitch from Darren Hall into the right field seats to give the Indians a 9-8 victory. Sorrento's two-run homer, which came with two outs in the bottom of the ninth inning, capped a miraculous comeback for the Indians, who in the third inning were trailing 8-0 to Cy Young winner David Cone.

5 ALBERT BELLE'S GRAND SLAM OFF LEE SMITH – In a season filled with dramatic game-ending home runs, this one, on July 18 at Jacobs Field, was the granddaddy of them all. With the Indians trailing the Angels 5-3 in the bottom of the ninth inning, Belle sent a pitch from Smith, baseball's all-time saves leader, soaring into the "barbecue pit" in center field for an electrifying game-ending grand slam home run that gave the Tribe a 7-5 win. It doesn't get any more dramatic than that.

4 ALBERT BELLE'S 50th HOME RUN – The blast came in the sixth inning during a 3-2 Tribe victory over Kansas City at Jacobs Field on Sept. 30th, the second-last game of the regular season. It also capped an astonishing two-month rampage by Belle, who blasted 31 home runs after Aug. 1. In September he tied Babe Ruth's record for most homers in a month with 17. Belle became just the 12th player in history to hit 50 homers in a year, and the first in history to have 50 homers and 50 doubles in the same year. Oh yeah, the historic home run was hit off Melvin Bunch, who was wearing (what else?) uniform No. 50.

THE DIVISION-CLINCHING VICTORY OVER BALTIMORE 3 – When Jeff Huson's popup settled into Jim Thome's glove at 11:02 p.m. on Sept. 8, the Indians had clinched the Central Division title, the club's first championship in 41 years. It was the fastest (123 games) clinching in baseball history, and it was followed by an emotional on-field ceremony in which Indians players helped hoist a division pennant atop the Jacobs Field scoreboard.

2 TONY PENA'S HOME RUN AT 2 O'CLOCK IN THE MORNING IN GAME 1 OF THE DIVISION SERIES VS. BOSTON – Pena's stunning game-winning home run off Zane Smith with two outs in the bottom of the 13th inning, at 2:08 a.m., gave the Indians a 5-4 win over the Red Sox at Jacobs Field. A loss in this game could have been catastrophic for the Indians. It would have given the Red Sox no worse than a split of the two games at Jacobs Field, with the final three games of the best-of-five series to be played in Boston. Instead, sparked by Pena's homer, the Tribe went on to sweep the Sox.

KENNY LOFTON'S MAD DASH IN GAME 6 OF THE ALCS AT SEATTLE 1 – Leading 1-0 in the 8th inning, the Indians had Ruben Amaro at third base and Lofton at second when Mariners catcher Dan Wilson's passed ball allowed both runners to score, Lofton streaking around third and sliding in safely past a surprised Randy Johnson. The play gave the Indians a 3-0 lead, and it was at that moment, despite playing in the hostile Kingdome and facing the nearly-unbeatable Johnson, that it became clear the Indians were going to win the game, and with it the American League pennant, meaning they were going to the World Series for the first time in 41 years.
